“ Let’s start by saying, my love for caramel or should I say addiction came from grandma. I would see her often in my early childhood years, but that changed after she moved to Texas. But she would still often send letters and little envelopes of gifts throughout the years, just to show she was thinking of me. Even though we weren’t close in our later years she still holds a strong tie to me and everyone in this family. It’s her powerful gene pool that helped create such a mega family. That’s something no one can take away from her. She has earned that, and built a legacy in the process.

Grandma,

Sorry for not being there and sorry for not saying good bye. Sometimes in life we are a little late, a little stubborn and a little selfish. And I pray you forgive me for that. I want to thank you for your flourishing bloodline that aided in bringing forth my beautiful family.

May you Rest In Peace!!!

“ Grandma,

You will be missed, your love and teachings will follow us for as long as we are alive. You were a loving and caring person you loved your family took care of us and even helped other kids in foster care. I know you had a huge heart and we all love you so much. I wish I could have spent more time with you when you were here. I remember all the evenings we spent at your house. I had a lot of childhood memories with you in Texas and Florida. I know you are looking down from heaven and I hope we can make you proud. Till we meet again. I Love you Grandma

“ Grandma,

I will always remember spending time with you, listening to you share your life stories with me. Your wisdom was a gift and I am grateful to have had the opportunity to glean from your many experiences.

Your love was the glue that held us all together... I've watched you unselfishly love with a servant's heart. You gave of yourself and all that you had in so many ways, to so many people. As a result, I have a very deep appreciation and utmost respect for all your efforts toward cultivating our big beautiful family. May we continue your legacy of loving each other as much as you loved us.

It was a pleasure knowing you. Even more of a pleasure loving you.... Rest in peace grandma, you will always be in my heart.

Your 1st granddaughter,
Tammy / Sasha
