Comments

“ My fondest memories of David are the times he spent at our house with my son when they were growing up. I just learned of his passing last night. He was a kind and gentle person. My condolences to the family.

“ Imperfection

Imperfection is a wonderful thing. It teaches us that even though something is not perfect, it can still be beautiful. Like the love of a mother who hasn't given up, regardless that she is only human and has faults. Like the prayer of an addict who just can't go one more day in active addiction. Like a magical plant that is poisonous to some people. Or a dog that is a little too fat. Like angels who cry. Like the fall of man. A thorny rose. Or half a rainbow. A beautiful little kitty who isn't yours anymore. But she's happy. An old, worn-out book that, regardless of its appearance, reveals the mysteries of the universe. Hope when you feel as if all hope should be abandoned. Faith in a God unseen. Love from a God who is sad and lonely, because we have all gone so far astray, and all He ever wanted was our love in return. Like an arrow turned upside down that leads to a better way than if it wasn't. A kiss from a man who barely has any life left in his eyes. A friend who points out all your flaws and won't accept second best. Like kindness unreturned. Or a blue, miserable place that saved your life. Sometimes, if you really think about it, the most beautiful things are imperfect. Their imperfection is their beauty.

I love you David. And I'll miss you forever.

“ Back to Back, Day after Day, we worked & played together, all the while, learning of your loving heart & mind by listening to your insightful, curious and forever kind voice, always continuing to share your past & present journey through dreams, ideas, stories, and memories...and always receptive to my comments, ideas, guidance and even when I deserved a punch in my big mouth, you were kind, replying w/o a slight of condescension... continuing to share your gifts with me, without fear, knowing our friendship was and will always be true, w/o judgment.

Today my heart shines in being a part of your short lived life, where it glows in knowing the universe accepts your soul unconditionally. No need to fret my friend, your memory is in us all and will be carried through our time here with much love and honor. It has been my absolute joy to have had these moments with you to remember forever. I pray you forgive me for leaving your side for a moment, a moment where you may have needed me most. It was not my intention to ever have you fall into an untimely departure and only to find happiness. I see now the reasons you never spoke of the future, as you were as I always believed, most mighty and all knowing. You will always hold a dear loving place in my heart... I miss you so much it brings me to tears... until we meet again... Forever you are loved, Christi Kemp Palaigos

“ David was one of the greatest people I have ever known and a great friend..I hate that we lost touch with each other over the years. I remember not very long ago when I was visiting Florida, I ran into him in a 7 eleven and he was excited to see me and my oldest son as I was to see him..David and I have many memories of all of the crazy things we had done, and I can go on forever about all of them, but in the end I just want David to rest in peace and know that I am truly sorry for losing contact with him and a few of my other close friends over the years I wish things had been different. God Bless you David I will miss you bud.

“ So sorry for your loss. I am a local realtor and worked with Dave for years. He was such a nice person. Always there when I needed him. No job was too big or too small. I'm sorry for his struggles and wish he could have gotten the help he needed. Rest in peace. You will be missed.
