“ Harold was a good, loving husband, father, son and friend. There is not a day that I don't think about him and miss him greatly. I think that no matter what family and friends may say the love we had will live in until we meet again. Missing you always. Your loving wife, Debbie

“ Man, I still can't believe that you are truly gone. I miss you dearly. I just wanted to post here that your children honored you in a very special way. They miss you so much, but was able to pay their respects to you. When I least expect it, I just start crying nonstop. If nothing else, this has taught me the true meaning of saying how you feel and show love while there is still time. Let the healing begin. #gone2soon

It has been over a month and the pain is still as strong as the day you died. Waking up every morning without you is like missing half of me. Always praying for you. Your loving wife, Debbie

“ I can remember a time, shortly after Mercedes introduced me to you as her then boyfriend many years ago, we decided to play tennis; it wasn't my thing. Long story short, that same time you, didn't hesitate to give me some tips and show me how to properly swing the racquet, because I was swinging it like a baseball bat. I appreciate that time and our many encounters and talks thereafter. One that I cherish the most, is you walking Mercedes down the aisle on our wedding day and giving me her hand in marriage. I appreciate you and love you. May you rest well and continue to look over us!

“ Harold was a co worker of mine at Publix ! The first day we met we clicked because we both would laugh and crack jokes and if you knew Harold you know he was funny and cool. I will miss those words of wisdom . About two weeks ago I seen Harold and something was different about him that day . We didn't crack jokes like we normally would but instead he preached to me that day . I asked how he was doing and he said “ I'm great , I'm blessed .. we got to be especially when he allow us to see another day “ .. but his words started to fade as I got a little busy taking care of customers i noticed he stalled a little that day on the front end too and had such a shiny glow . Had I known that'd be my last time ever seeing him again I would've cracked one last joke and gave him a hug . Get some rest Harold hope to see you again one day ! And to his family I pray God give you all the strength in this troubling time he always talked about his love for his children and wife praying for you all .

“ My Grandson who is 6, came into the store all the time with me. Sometimes I would leave our store go and get him at school and then come back. Recently my Grandson saw me crying and asked why. I said I had a friend who was missing! He asked who! I described him as a Big Teddy bear! He then tells me he knows him! Says that's the Slim Jim man!! I was so confused! He said Harold saw me eating a slim Jim and then pilled one out of his lunchbox!! ❤️❤️❤️☐

“ Harold was an associate at Publix. He always had a smile and hug for me and many others during the day. His powerful personality made you love him for who he was. I will miss him, his smile and caring way. May you rest in peace and the glory of the Lord. With much love and saddened heart, Love Susie

“ I met Harold Pittman Jr at the VA hospital West Palm Beach, FL July 2013. He was always dressed nicely with a dress shirt, pants, tie and shiny shoes. He impressed me with the courage to step out of his comfort zone and asked me out. For some reason I said "we will see". He pursued and I grew to love and respect him in so many ways. He helped me be a better person. I loved him in good times and bad, sickness and health. In the process of living there were good choices and poor choices. That is what we vowed to do when we married. To continue to work through issues to build a stronger marriage. Harold loved his children very much. He was very proud of them. And as they grew into adults and had families of their own, he only had praise and loving words to express his joy of having such a wonderful relationship with them. His had love of family and this extended to friends and coworkers at Publix and AA. He was willing to mentor co-workers, and set an example to exceed standards. He leaned on some people when he needed to and had others lean on him for strength and fortitude. He has endeared himself to all that have loved him, known him and have benefitted from those experiences. A man after my own heart. Rest in peace. I will see you.
Love,
your wife,
Debbie Pittman
