“ I am really saddened to hear the news that Misty has passed away. I had not communicated with her in a couple of years but people informed me periodically of all the great things happening in her life like her daughter's continued success in figure skating, to the exciting news of her getting engaged. Hearing news like this made me happy to think things are going well for her. I truly regret not staying in contact with her personally to share in those things that made her happy.

My favorite Misty story is when she dressed up as me for Halloween. As I walked onto the CDC-INFO production floor, I noticed Misty hiding behind a cubicle partition with only her head in view with a huge smile. I did not think anything of it because many people had dressed up so I walked by, said good morning, and headed to my desk. Misty followed behind me and began to mimic my walk. It took me a few paces to figure out the joke was on me. Turns out Misty had dressed up in shirt, tie, and slacks to duplicate my appearance. People on the production floor were in on the joke, and I have to admit I found it funny too once I figured out what she was doing. I often think if this story and smile.

I consider myself fortunate to have had Misty as my supervisor, fellow nurse, and most importantly friend for the 15 months we worked together in Arizona. Her passing has left me thinking about the positive influence she had on my life. Thank you Misty for making the world a better place.
